

“I’ve read both of Lee’s novels and I find in her writing a unique voice in the world of noir fiction. Lee gives us a first person heroine called Julie Page: Fragile, alternately likable and rebarbative. She also gives us an unforgettable setting: Berle, a down-at-the-heel town on the wrong side of LA whose only charm is its location on the Pacific Ocean. To this she adds a score of memorable characters and mysteries that twist and turn along with the terrain.

Lee is committed to her craft, her stories, and her characters. And she is one hell of a good writer.”
